Electrolux Professional Group receives industry-top rating in Climate Change by CDP

Electrolux Professional has retained its B-score in the Carbon Disclosure Project (CDP) ranking, achieving the highest ranking on the climate change list compared to its listed and ranked competitors in the industry.

Companies that score “B” on an A-F scale have addressed the environmental impacts of their business and ensure solid environmental management. Although the Climate Change questionnaire by CDP in 2022 was more extensive than in previous years, Electrolux Professional Group managed to retain its B-rating.

“We are known as a sustainability leader in our industry, continuously striving to improve and develop the most sustainable solutions in the most sustainable way. Therefore, it is very satisfying to have received confirmation that we have retained our B-score,” says Alberto Zanata, President, and CEO of Electrolux Professional Group.

CDP is the world’s largest corporate survey on climate change, ranking more than 18,000 companies worldwide. CDP disclosure and scores play a key role in keeping companies on a journey of continuous environmental improvement. Read more about CDP
